

1. Authors

Marie-Anne Goujon

Urban planner

Marie-Anne Goujon is a 2nd-year master's student in urban and territorial planning at the University Paris 1 Pantheon-Sorbonne, following two years of preparatory class in literature and social sciences (B/L) in Orleans. Her 1st year master's research dissertation was on the evolution of practices and opinions regarding suburban areas, by studying a resident-led street gardening project organized by the CAUE 95. She is particularly interested in the borders between the common good and private interests, particularly in terms of housing.

Projects with the Forum

The "Macron buses," a low-cost mode of transportation put to the test of sustainability and desirability

Publications with the Forum