- Call for papers

Research about the role of mobility in society is conducted and published in many languages, but the global dominance of English in academic publishing and international policy forums has resulted in the exclusion of a wide variety of opinions and perspectives.

In order to address these inequalities of current knowledge practices, the Mobile Lives Forum, a research institute on mobility and sustainability transitions, seeks to grant greater visibility to research conducted in Spanish and Portuguese in Central and South America. We will do this by translating articles into English and French and publishing them in our website, with a link to the original versions in Spanish and Portuguese.

Researchers and practitioners working on mobility-related issues are invited to submit short articles (1,500 words) in Spanish and Portuguese about any aspect of their work. We encourage:

- submissions with a specific emphasis on people's ways of life, aspirations and everyday practices and the challenges and opportunities of ongoing social, political and economic transformations for sustainable mobility transitions;
- submission of articles about high-quality research that has been influential in policy and academic debates;
- submissions from authors who have not previously published in English due to language barriers to participate.

Selected contributions will be translated into English and French by the Mobile Lives Forum and featured in the Mobile Lives Forum's website and regular newsletter. Please note that audiovisual material (photos, videos, comic vignettes, sound recordings, etc.) can be included in the article when relevant.

The deadline for this round of submissions is 15 June 2021.
